U.P. construction seeks career-seekers

MARQUETTE – The Upper Peninsula Construction Council is now accepting applications from current high school juniors for Construction Connect UP during the 2026–27 school year.

Construction Connect UP is designed to help students move seamlessly from the classroom into a career in the skilled trades. Students who complete the program may be directly placed into registered apprenticeships, allowing them to bypass the standard application process.

The program was developed through collaboration with UPCC signatory contractors and Upper Peninsula building trades unions, UP Michigan Works, Delta-Schoolcraft ISD, Dickinson-Iron ISD, and the Marquette-Alger Regional Education Services Agency. Together, these partners created a program that is skill-based, approved by both labor and industry, and closely connected to real job site experience.

Participating students must have schedules that allow for two hours in the morning or afternoon to work and train on job sites, where they earn $15 per hour while gaining hands-on experience.

To qualify, students must, at the time the program begins:

- Be a high school senior and at least 17 years of age.
- Be enrolled in a certified CTE Program.
- Have a driver's license, or be in the process of obtaining one, and have reliable transportation.
- Pass a drug screen.

"There is a significant demand for skilled trades professionals across the Upper Peninsula," said UPCC Executive Director Mike Smith. "Construction Connect UP gives students the chance to learn in real work environments, earn a paycheck, and begin building a career right away."

Students can apply in a link that can be found at <https://upconstruction.org/>

UAW wins historic pact in the South

The United Auto Workers have just marked one of the most important milestones in the union's history: they have officially reached a tentative agreement on a first contract with Volkswagen in Chattanooga, Tenn.

The agreement, reached on Feb. 4, is the culmination of 502 days of bargaining and a successful strike authorization vote by a supermajority of workers in October 2025.

It includes a 20 percent wage increase over four years, reduced health care costs, job security protections, the right to strike over health and safety grievances, the recognition of skilled trades, and many other protections and benefits. It will now proceed to a vote by the union's members.

This marks the first time the union has successfully organized and bargained an agreement with a foreign-owned, nonunion auto company in the South.

"For years, Chattanooga workers were told to settle for less while Volkswagen made record profits. So, the workers stood together and won their union – and now they've secured a life-changing first agreement," said UAW President Shawn Fain.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE GORDIE HOWE INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE between Detroit and Windsor has been a massive employer of building trades workers on both side of the Detroit River since 2018. Nearing completion, the magnificent span wrought by the trades was the surprising object of a bitter Truth Social post on Feb. 9 by President Trump. There were falsehoods aplenty in Trump's rant, with the bottom line indicating that he threatened to block the opening of the span. Later the White House added that Trump wants the U.S. to have slice of the tolls collected from the bridge – the original deal allowed Canada to collect the tolls as reimbursement because they funded the entire cost of the bridge's construction. Former Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder, who was in office when the deal with Canada was struck, offers his perspective in the Viewpoints on Page 2. And a related statement from current Gov. Gretchen Whitmer: "The Canadians have paid for the bridge. The bridge was built with organized labor, union labor on both sides of the bridge, including Michiganders. It is a really important part of our economy, the largest crossing in North America. And so it is important that it continues to move forward and open up on time, and that's my expectation."

Truth? Social – Trump's rant about Gordie Howe Bridge defies reality

By Marty Mulcahy, Editor

Here are some actual "Truths" about the Gordie Howe International Bridge, which has been a rock-solid employer, and a source of pride, for building trades union workers on both side of the border for the past eight years. With the president spreading misinformation on his Truth Social platform about one of the most prominent infrastructure projects in Michigan and North America, we hope providing a few facts will be of a benefit to our readers.

- The government of Canada is funding the entire $4.7 billion cost of construction, and the original deal with the State of Michigan and the U.S. will allow Canadian taxpayers to recoup that investment over time through collection of bridge tolls.
- Canada itself does not own the bridge: it is owned jointly owned by Canada and Michigan.
- If you worked on the bridge, it's unlikely you feel that the U.S. has received "Absolutely NOTHING!" as Trump wrote. "Since the fall 2018 construction start, 15,000 workers have contributed 19+ million hours across all four project components." –Year-end report for 2025 by Bridging North America, the private-sector consortium contracted to design, build and finance the span.
- Trump stated that "virtually no U.S. content" comprises the bridge. There have been no official numbers released from the government of Canada, the State of Michigan or Bridging North America about the percentage of U.S. or Canadian steel used on the bridge. But if Canada is paying for the bridge, they could hardly be blamed for using Canadian materials on the span itself. But the 13 structures in the 137-acre U.S. Port of Entry, as well as the I-75 highway and approach work in Detroit, used U.S. content.

'What does the United States of America get?' – A modern bridge and about 10 million U.S. building trades hours

So that nothing can be taken out of context, here is the verbatim, unedited, and occasionally fact-free content of President Trump's Truth Social post on Feb. 9 related to the Gordie Howe International Bridge – and some other stuff.

"As everyone knows, the Country of Canada has treated the United States very unfairly for decades. Now, things are turning around for the U.S.A., and FAST! But imagine, Canada is building a massive bridge between Ontario and Michigan. They own

I worked in a Walmart deli for three years. It made me understand why labor unions in America are more popular now than they've been in generations.

(The Gallup organization last year reported that 68 percent of U.S. adults approve of labor unions, part of a popularity trend last reached in the early 1960s).

I'd heard horror stories about what it'd be like to work at Walmart. The customers would be rude. The treatment from higher-ups would be bad. The day-to-day would grind you down.

I tried to wave away these warnings. I'd already worked some not-so-glamorous jobs, from sweeping floors as a janitor to manning a footlong hot dog shack (the hot dogs were a footlong – not the shack). Surely Walmart wouldn't be so awful. I was wrong. And frankly, I was unprepared for how soul-crushing it would be.

Though it was just a deli inside a Walmart and not some big-shouldered butcher shop, the job was more physically demanding than you'd expect. Slicing meat and serving customers was only part of the role. Other frequent tasks: spending hours in a subzero freezer unloading clumsily stacked pallets of Trump holds up $16 billion 'Democrat' tunnel project because of ... naming rights?

By Mrtly Mulcahy

The Feb. 6-17 pause on work at one of the largest civil construction projects in the country, the vital Hudson Tunnel Rail Project between New York and New Jersey, is a continuation of President Trump's exasperating focus on shutting down public building projects that are stopping paychecks from a solid bloc of his supporters: unionized construction workers.

Two years into the Gateway Development Commission's Hudson Tunnel project, Trump in October abruptly froze federal funding on the $16 billion tunnel project (between two blue states) during the government shutdown.

At the time he told Fox News' Maria Bartiromo "that what we're doing is we're cutting Democrat programs that we didn't want, because they made one mistake, they didn't realize that gives me the right to cut programs that Republicans never wanted. You know, giveaways, welfare programs, etc. And we're doing that. And we're cutting them permanently. And we're cutting a $20 billion project that Shumer fought for 15 years to get, and I'm cutting the project, and the project is going to be dead."

The federal funding freeze began in October, and this month diminishing funds finally forced construction on the project to halt entirely. Trump's "Shumer" comment refers to Senate Minority

Canceled NIOSH safety research agency restored

By Nick Fox
Laborers Health and Safety Fund of North America

Crippled by staffing cuts since last April, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) and its essential programs are finally being restored.

That's the unexpected and welcome news released Jan. 14 by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), which oversees NIOSH, the federal agency tasked with worker safety research and programs to prevent work-related injuries, illnesses and deaths.

"We wholeheartedly support the full restoration of NIOSH," said Laborers International Union General President Brent Booker. "NIOSH protected America's workers for over 50 years, including LIUNA members and other survivors following the terrorist attacks on 9/11. Firing the workers behind these essential safety programs was misguided and dangerous then, and restoring their jobs is long overdue."

Historically, NIOSH has been responsible for:

- Certifying respirators at its National Personal Protective Technology Laboratory – the only U.S. lab authorized to do this work.

Good start for building; modest job gains overall

U.S. construction employment started 2026 with an increase of 33,000 jobs in January, with gains concentrated in nonresidential construction, according to an analysis of Bureau of Labor Statistics data released Feb. 11.

It was a good month for the building industry, which accounted for more than a quarter of U.S. jobs created last month.

The Associated General Contractors of America's analysis said that "while January hiring was stronger than expected, contractors remain cautious about prospects for sustained growth in 2026."

"It's encouraging to see solid construction job gains in January after a year of uneven employment," said Ken Simonson, the association's chief economist. "But those gains will fade later this year unless policymakers provide greater clarity and stability for infrastructure and energy investment."

Total construction employment reached 8,308,000 in January, an increase of 33,000 from December. Over the past 12 months, the industry has added 44,000 jobs, a gain of 0.5 percent, outpacing the 0.2 percent increase

Masons brave elements to make mausoleums

CLINTON TWP. – A new collection of mausoleums is going up at Resurrection Cemetery, and a group of Boom Stone masons have them covered. Or more accurately – they will have them covered with granite by the time warmer weather arrives to make their jobs a lot easier.

The crew of masons, mem-will certainly be the most visible aspect of the project when it is completed, which is expected to be complete this summer. They're placing four different types of granite on the three mausoleums which are arranged in a semi-circle near a new chapel that's also under construction.

Boom Stone Foreman Scott Reese is overseeing the granite installation, working alongside a crew of 10-13 masons. Their

Alternative bridge facts

Last night, my wife and I had a quiet evening watching Olympic highlights, including some incredible Michigan skaters. The quiet was quickly shattered by President Donald Trump’s announcement that he might stop the opening of the Gordie Howe International Bridge.

Since I played a significant role in the bridge project, my phone and email have been flooded with media inquiries. I have generally kept a low profile over the past few years, but this topic merits a few comments.

Most responses to the president’s comments have been in favor of the GHIB, asking him not to stop the opening. Instead of a similar statement, let me take a nerdier approach and analyze the key underlying points in his Truth Social post and important historical background.

In Trump’s Truth Social post, he says:
•“They (Canada) own both the Canada and the United States sides.” This is incorrect. Canada and the State of Michigan are 50/50 owners of the new bridge. Canada was wonderful and financed the entire bridge. They will get repaid with interest from the tolls. Michigan and the United States got their half-ownership with no investment. That is a great deal.

•“(It was) built with virtually no U.S. content.” This is incorrect. There was a waiver of the Buy America Act for the actual bridge part of the construction project. Why? Because half the bridge is in Canada. Buy American should not apply to a project that is half outside our country. The workers and materials for the bridge construction have come from both countries. The U.S. customs plaza and the Michigan-side approach to work have been built with U.S. materials and workers, just as the Canadian equivalents have been built with Canadian resources.

•“We (U.S.) should own, perhaps, at least one half of this asset.” We do already!

You may wonder who loses if the Gordie Howe International Bridge is delayed or stopped:

• Obviously, Canada. They have a huge investment in the bridge.

• U.S. and Canadian companies. The Ambassador Bridge has hindered commerce for decades and increased costs for manufacturing operations. The GHIB will solve these problems and provide for faster economic growth on both sides.

• U.S. and Canadian workers. The GHIB will create new jobs in logistics and other areas on both sides.

If the GHIB is delayed or stopped, there actually is one big winner: The Moroun family and the Ambassador Bridge Co. (Editor’s note: The New York Times reported Feb. 9 that Ambassador Bridge owner Matthew Moroun met with U.S. Secretary of Commerce Howard Lutnick hours before Trump’s threat on Truth Social to block the bridge).

Over the decades, the Marouns have spent millions trying to stop the GHIB. Why? Every day, they make much more money at our expense. In 2012 alone, they spent more than $30 million on a ballot proposal to prevent construction of the GHIB. For years, they have had active lobbyists in Lansing and Washington trying to sabotage this project. They have also made very large political contributions in both places.

President Trump, I would encourage you to challenge your advisers and the sources for your post to correct the information they have provided. The GHIB is a great deal for America that I hope you will be proud of. Canada has been a stalwart partner on this massive project through multiple governments on both sides of the Detroit River. It is a big win-win for all of us.

Rick Snyder (R), Michigan governor 2011-2019
(condensed from a Feb. 10 Detroit News column)

UNIONIZED BUILDING TRADES workers have enjoyed years of employment building the Gordie Howe Bridge, buildings in the U.S. Port of Entry, and on sewer, water, freeway and surface street work related to the bridge. If only for the 19 million work hours that were created by building the bridge and back-bridge areas in both Windsor and Detroit (above), President Trump’s claim that the U.S. gets nothing from the bridge is blatantly false. It will take many decades of toll collection from bridge traffic for Canada to recoup what it spent on construction, after which it will split the tolls 50/50 with Michigan. Ironically, the Trump-imposed tariff war with Canada has reduced commercial traffic at the border and will likely lengthen the payoff time for Canada. With bridge and related construction almost complete, Trump is apparently seeking to rip up the 2012 agreement with Canada so the U.S. gets a cut of the tolls.

“Strong hiring reflects sustained infrastructure investment, private development activity and long-term confidence in the build environment,” said Megan Tanel, president and CEO of the Association of Equipment Manufacturers.

The BLS numbers showed that a significant portion of January’s growth occurred in non-residential construction, which added 27,900 jobs for the month. Residential employment remains below year-ago levels.

The monthly Dodge Momentum Index for U.S. construction, issued Feb. 7 showed a 6.3 decline in January. Year-over-year, the Dodge index was up 29 percent compared to January 2025.

Meanwhile, in the bigger picture, the BLS said 133,000 jobs were created throughout the entire U.S. workforce in January. It was a pretty good number – but the revisions to employment numbers in 2025 were a bit of a downer.

Said Economic Policy Institute economist Elise Gould: “With the downward revisions, the labor market added only 181,000 jobs total in 2025, just 15,000 per month on average.”

Singing the bankers’ blues

One of the most obnoxious sounds in nature is the whine of a Wall Street banker. It’s a cross between the tantrum of a peevish brat and the blathering of a sputtering old plutocrat.

Consider the long, pitious whimper of Jamie Dimon, potentate of the powerful JPMorgan Chase banking empire.

He constantly whines about laws to restrict banker greed, even toting around a Rube Goldberg-style cartoon depicting a tangle of rules that, he squeals, is choking poor Wall Streeters like him.

Before you break into tears about Jamie’s plight, though, notice that he and his bank are not choking on rules, but gorging on riches. Dimon himself pocketed – get this – $770 million in personal pay last year.

Golly, we should all suffer like poor Jamie!

And he’s hardly alone in singing the “Talking Banker Blues,” for that elite clique has long pouted that they’re paupers compared to the billionaires of high tech. So, mounting an odd boardroom “labor action,” bankers have been getting drastic payhikes. The CEO of Citigroup, for example, recently set a new bottom line expectation for top-floor bankers: A 2025 paycheck of more than $100 million!

How can a business lavish such a windfall on one guy? Easy. The CEO slashed tens of thousands of bank employees from Citi’s payroll last year, so he got their pay.

Woody Guthrie once wrote a parody of such predatory behavior, singing “I am a jolly banker, A jolly banker am I.”

Today’s Wall Street aristocrats are jolly, too, bloating their extravagant wealth by taking wages and livelihoods from thousands of their own employees. As Woody might sing, that’s how inequality “happens.”

both the Canada and the United States side and, of course, built it with virtually no U.S. content. President Barack Hussein Obama stupidly gave them a waiver so they could get around the BUY AMERICAN Act, and not use any American products, including our Steel. Now, the Canadian Government expects me, as President of the United States, to PERMIT them to just “take advantage of America!” What does the United States of America get – Absolutely NOTHING! Ontario won’t even put U.S. spirits, beverages, and other alcoholic products, on their shelves, they are absolutely prohibited from doing so and now, on top of everything else, Prime Minister Carney wants to make a deal with China – which will eat Canada alive. We’ll just get the leftovers! I don’t think so. The first thing China will do is terminate ALL Ice Hockey being played in Canada, and permanently eliminate The Stanley Cup. The Tariffs Canada charges us for our Dairy products have, for many years, been unacceptable, putting our Farmers at great financial risk. I will not allow this bridge to open until the United States is fully compensated for everything we have given them, and also, importantly, Canada treats the United States with the Fairness and Respect that we deserve. We will start negotiations, IMMEDIATELY. With all that we have given them, we should own, perhaps, at least one half of this asset. The revenues generated because of the U.S. Market will be astronomical. Thank you for your attention to this matter!

BUILDING MICHIGAN: Square D HISTORY IN THE MAKING

By Marty Mulcahy

A little bit of Detroit is found on the labels of circuit breaker and electrical panels the world over.

Even electricians may have no idea that the familiar “Square D” logo on old and modern electrical equipment has its roots in the Motor City – the “D” stands for Detroit.

The Square D company is gone as a stand-alone corporate entity, and so is the building that housed its manufacturing on the near east side of Detroit. But the name lives on after 124 years – with Square D electrical equipment still a strong brand and its products still sold at electrical supply houses and your local home center.

“The company is one of America’s best-known brands of electrical distribution and control equipment serving residential, commercial and industrial customers,” said a tribute article by Control Engineering magazine in 2002, marking the Square D Co.’s 100th anniversary. “The company is one of America’s best-known brands of electrical distribution and control equipment serving residential, commercial and industrial customers.”

And that hasn’t changed. Since 1991 Square D has been a brand of Paris, France-based Schneider Electric, which is a $9-billion enterprise that reports it’s committed to “building a new electric world: in more than 130 countries worldwide.”

Square D, the company said, “accounts for the greatest share of $2.7 billion in annual sales by the company’s North American Division, which provides nearly one-third of Schneider’s global revenues and employs 17,000 people in the U.S., Canada and Mexico.”

The roots of Square D were formed on Dec. 15, 1902, by Detroiters Bryson Horton and James McCarthy. Their company, McBride Manufacturing Co., initially focused on manufacturing cartridge fuses. “They hired two women to assemble an initial order of 1,000 cartridge-type electrical fuses, working in an 18x40-foot rented room,” said a company history by Schneider. The business “fueled rapid growth at McBride Manufacturing during its first decade in Detroit.”

McBride “grew steadily and became one of the major U.S. suppliers of electrical products,” said a 2017 corporate case study by HKT Consultant. “McBride sold some of its products direct to a few large accounts, but most of the product line was sold through a nationwide network of distributors.”

Horton, an 1895 electrical engineering graduate from the University of Michigan, led the business while the company underwent several management changes. He was credited with the invention of the safety switch, which encased high voltage switches and started the company’s main line of business of circuit breakers and enclosed control panels. Their first enclosed safety switch was introduced in 1909.

“During the first decade of business, the company expanded into various other electrical products,” said a write-up by the IT History Society. One of their innovations was to introduce and sell fuses in cases and fuse switches in boxes.

“In 1908, the company was renamed Detroit Fuse and Manufacturing. Soon after their renaming to Detroit Fuse and Manufacturing, the company adopted their famous logo: a capital letter D for Detroit enclosed in a square. The logo was stamped on all Square D’s switches and products.”

Horton didn’t initially intend to name the company “Square D.” The name grew organi-cally from electricians and other customers, who assigned the name by themselves having observed the familiar logo stamped on all manner of its products, especially its “safety switch.”

“The simple trademark design soon had customers asking for the ‘Square D’ switch,” the Control Engineering article said. “This new switch was so successful that the fuse business was sold in 1917.” That same year, the firm trademarked the Square D logo, and the company was renamed ... drum roll... “Square D Co.”

Horton stayed on and served as Square D’s president until 1928.

The Schneider company history said throughout the 1920s and into the 1930s, Square D grew by acquiring and manufacturing related electrical products, such as porcelain insulating parts and industrial controllers. The firm eventually grew beyond Detroit, and opened operations in Peru, Ind., Milwaukee, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Houston. During the 1940s, Square D counted 10 factories in the U.S. and a workforce of 7,000.

During World War II, Square D devoted more than 90 percent of its manufacturing to the defense industry, making military aviation circuit breakers, aircraft instruments, and high-precision military binoculars. The company also produced electrical, distribution, and control equipment necessary for industrial war manufacturing.

Post-war, the company’s growth was fueled by a new product that replaced the common fuse. “In 1955,” Control Engineering said, “the revolutionary Square D circuit breaker found eager markets in commercial, residential and industrial applications, succeeding traditional screw type fuse boxes in most homes and businesses.”

The International Directory of Company

Histories said the 1955 “QO” Square D circuit breaker “turned out to be one of the most influential developments in the control of electricity.”

The company opened new manufacturing in seven other states and abroad, and its circuit breakers and other products sold well despite a remarkably dull advertising slogan: “Wherever Electricity is Distributed and Controlled.”

The company’s continued national expansion led it to relocate its corporate headquarters in 1960 from Detroit to the Chicago suburb of Park Ridge, Ill., and then move again in 1979 to nearby Palatine, Ill.

In 1991, Schneider Electric, a French multinational corporation, acquired Square D, and its products today “are present in all sectors” of the electrical products market.

A CRUSTY SQUARE D electrical switchbox cover, with its logo prominent, likely from the 1950s. Square D pioneered the enclosed safety switch in the early 1900s to protect industrial workers from the hazards of exposed electrical switches. Founded in Detroit, Square D has been one of the electrical products industry’s most recognizable brands for well over a century.

THE SQUARE D PLANT at 6060 Rivard St. in Detroit, circa 1920. It’s not clear when the plant closed as a manufacturer of Square D products, although the company headquarters left Detroit for Illinois in 1960. The abandoned plant was demolished only in the past couple of years in anticipation of the expansion of the I-94 and I-75 freeways. Square D began its operations at the site in 1902, and saw a major expansion in 1915.

He bumped against an exposed electric switch!”

THE man with that message is on his way to your office this minute. It may take him months to get there—but if you have dangerous open-knife switches in your factory or home, the bearer of bad news is coming.

The cuts on the left show the operation of the Square D Safety Switch. The switch is enclosed in an insulated, drawn-out box. It can be operated safely by a child, furnished for in the dark, touched with copper wire, bracelets, finger rings, wet hands; bumped accidentally with steel tools, and no one will ever be hurt. It is spring and safe. It is operated by a handle on the outside of the box. It can be locked shut if desired, or locked in the “off” position to prevent careless closing of the switch when repairs are being made on the line or equipment it controls.

Square D Safety Switch

Prevents Unnecessary Death from Electric Shock

Is it better to have your contractor or your electrician replace your old-fashioned open-knife switches with Square D Switches, or to wait at your desk for the inevitable accident?

It is nearer than you think. New production methods, new machinery, green work-people who do not know these dangers, all are combining to electrify some poor man or woman and the insurance companies know it.

Large industrial firms that employ Safety Engineers have already installed Square D Safety Switches. A few are: American Steel & Wire Co., American Car & Foundry Co., Bethlehem Steel Co., Carnegie Steel Co., Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Goodrich Rubber Co., Hudson Motor Car Co., National Tube Co., Ford Motor Co., Packard Motor Car Co., and Pennsylvania Railroad.

Installed by your electrical dealer or contractor. Get information from him about Square D Safety Switches, or write us direct. Over 300 sizes for homes, office buildings, factories.

THE DEPARTED “JONES” was surely the figment of an advertising writer’s imagination, but when this iconic Square D ad made the rounds of major magazines circa 1919-1921, electrocutions in the workplace were all too common. Detroit-based Square D was a pioneer in the development and manufacture of enclosed electrical safety switches, and the “D” inside the square lives on today.

Playbook for anti-union employers: pile on the indignities, push turnover during my orientation, right after I was lectured on why I should never join a union, I heard that Walmart sponsored a health insurance plan. But management had a cute way of scheduling people just short of the hours they’d need to qualify for coverage. And retirement benefits? Non-existent. Let alone any protection from being an at-will employee.

None of this was ideal, but it was tolerable. For me, at that time in my life. The worst part, though, was the total lack of control I had over this labor that made up such a big part of my life. My schedule shifted wildly without notice. One week I’d work 2 p.m. to 11 p.m. The next week it was 5 a.m. to 2 p.m., with a few random midday shifts thrown in. Making plans with friends or spending time with family was impossible.

At the deli counter, customers could mistreat you, but you had to swallow it unless you wanted a manager to chew you out. Some customers seemed to enjoy making absurd demands. No, I wanted the turkey to be ground into sawdust, not chipped! Working in such an environment every day really starts to destroy your dignity.

The best aspect of the job was the other people. My co-workers were very nice and hard-working. It’s not like I was scanning the streets of some distant roadside looking for IEDs. But working at Walmart still made something click in my mind.

For a long time, I was really frustrated by what I thought was the cluelessness of people in the corporate world. Did they not know that this isn’t how a business should be run? Did they not see how many people were quitting every week? Their methods made no sense. Why would they structure their company in a way that exposed workers to so many daily indignities?

Then it hit me: daily indignities aren’t a flaw in the system. They are the system. If workers are treated decently, they stick around. When they stay, they form relationships and begin to invest in their community. They realize they have things in common with the people around them – like being disrespected by management and not being paid their fair share.

When workers see themselves as “we,” they’re more likely to demand better.

That’s terrifying for executives whose priority is protecting their bottom line and bloated compensation packages. Companies like Walmart do everything they can to atomize their workforce – grinding people down, churning them out, and maintaining annual turnover rates around 70 percent. When everyone is temporary, isolated, and exhausted, there is no “we.” It’s just me. And one guy is so much easier to control.

Like many Americans, I grew up with little exposure to organized labor. But over time, I’ve come to see how unions like the Teamsters have been one of the few forces in our economy that push back against the excesses of big business that I experienced firsthand.

It’s easy now to witness every day, in the news media and online across social media, if we’re willing to pay attention. In the last year, the waste giant Republic Services spent over $50 million in a failed attempt to break strike lines of hundreds of sanitation workers represented by the Teamsters. The company’s effort was for nothing, in the end, as every single Teamster who was pushed onto the picket line emerged with a strong new contract. It was senseless greed by a corporation well known all across this country.

As employers rake in higher profits than any time in American history – while still offering workers scraps – it’s no mystery why unions are more popular now than they’ve been in decades. History shows that when greed goes unchecked, workers band together.

As companies like Republic Services, Amazon, and Walmart prioritize that bottom line over the health and prosperity of working people, there’s likely no end in sight to our nation’s resurgent support of a labor force that’s fighting back, demanding respect, and getting organized.

Just joking
At a stoplight, the driver of a Yugo rolls down his window and shouts to the driver of a Rolls Royce, "Hey, buddy, nice car! You got a phone in your Rolls?"

I've got one in my Yugo!"

The driver of Rolls looks over and says simply, "Yes I have a phone."

The driver of the Yugo says, "Cool! Hey, you got a fridge in there too? I've got a fridge in the back seat of my Yugo!"

The Rolls driver, looking annoyed, says, "Yes, I have a refrigerator."

The Yugo driver says, "That's great, man! You got a TV in there, too? You know, I've got one in my back seat!"

The Rolls driver, now very annoyed, responds, "Yes, of course I have a television!"

The Yugo driver of the Yugo says, "Very cool car! Hey, you got a bed in there, too? I got a bed in the back of my Yugo!"

Upset that he did not have a bed, the Rolls sped away straight to a shop where he promptly ordered that a bed be installed in the back of the Rolls. The next morning he picked up his car with the newly installed bed.

He pulled out of the lot and begins searching for the Yugo. After an all-day search, he finds the Yugo parked, with all the windows fogged up from the inside.

The driver of the Rolls got out and knocked on the Yugo's window. No answer. He knocked and knocked, and eventually the owner stuck his soaking wet head out of the Yugo's back window.

"Just to let you now, I now have a bed in the back of my Rolls-Royce!" the driver of the Rolls told him.

The driver of the Yugo looked at him and said, "You got me out of the shower to tell me that?!"

In Closing: On February 5th, we hosted a Building Trades Career Fair at our Union Hall and throughout our campus in all three school buildings. With the help of several different trades and our training department, we were able to bring together students, job seekers and union representatives to showcase the outstanding opportunities available in the skilled trades.

The event highlighted the strength and unity of our Building Trades partners and demonstrated the growing demand for highly trained professionals across our industry. We also had the pleasure of hosting Michigan Works, Conduit to the Trades and the Monroe Community College.

We had over 500 visitors to our campus that night and it could not have happened without the hard work of Justin, Kristina and all the volunteers that were made up of instructors and apprentices. The event was a huge success, and we look forward to hosting again real soon. Thank you to all who supported this event and a special thank you to The Monroe Masters Association for providing food and drinks for all who attended.

41ST UA GENERAL CONVENTION DELEGATES NOMINATION AND ELECTION NOTICE. United Association Local 174. This constitutes your official notice of the nominations and election for Delegates to the 41st UA General Convention in August 2026 pursuant to Section 15 of the UA Constitution.

ELECTION. The election for the position of Delegate will be conducted by secret ballot on the date and at the time and location set forth below:
Date: Tuesday, March 3, 2026
Time: 7:00 p.m.
Place: 1008 O’Malley Dr., Coopersville, MI 49404

RUN-OFF ELECTION. If two or more candidates for Delegate receive the exact same number of votes and the Election Committee determines that, based on Local 174’s likely allotment of Delegates under Section 12 of the UA Constitution and the ranking of the candidates, it is possible that one of the candidates may ultimately serve as a Delegate while the other candidate may ultimately serve as an Alternate Delegate, a Run-Off Election shall be held on Tuesday, March 17, 2026 at the Local 174 Hall, 1008 O’Malley Dr., Coopersville, MI 49404, unless all candidates agree to determine their respective rankings based on a coin-flip or drawing of straws.

A Run-Off Election will not be necessary if, for example, three candidates tie for the second highest number of votes because there is no chance that Local 174 will have less than 4 Delegates to the Convention based on the formula set forth in Section 12 of the UA Constitution.

A meeting of candidates for Delegate will be held immediately after the Nominations Meeting. Candidates should make every effort to attend this meeting.

All inquiries regarding the election should be directed to Office Manager Lisa Johnson.

Union Strong Phone App: If you have not downloaded our app and would like to, reach out to the front office for the link or QR code.

Organizing Update: One of the biggest gripes from the non-union sector is insurance. It’s getting so expensive to insure families and themselves and when this is coming out of your weekly paycheck...in some cases it’s a decision of health coverage or putting food on the table. As represented workers, we collectively bargain for the benefits we have on top of our pay!

It would make sense to me that because of the substandard wages these workers receive already, wouldn’t it be common sense to provide benefits for these workers at no cost? It’s just simple GREED! Continue talking to these workers, we have more in common than what separates us! All workers deserve opportunity! “We’re all doing the same work, we’re just not all getting the same wages, benefits and opportunity!”

Better wages, benefits, insurance you don’t have to pay for, and a defined pension - the message is clear; all workers deserve a UNION! Work safe, Johnny Ortiz: (616) 307-8551.

Hiring Rule Reminder: As per section 5.8 of the CBA, the 50/50 hiring provision applies only to jobs working under the Local CBA. Any national agreement jobs calling for manpower are not eligible for the 50/50 provision.

SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY
REPRESENTING BUILDING TRADES
BROTHERS & SISTERS OVER 35 YEARS
BIESKE & ASSOCIATES

Many people are wrongly rejected when they apply for Social Security Disability benefits. Money was taken out of their paychecks for Social Security taxes to ensure that they would receive disability benefits if they could no longer work full-time. Sadly, the government denies approximately 60% of those who apply for disability benefits.

Attorneys J.B. Bieske and Jennifer Alfonsi have 55 years combined experience representing only Social Security disability clients. And they personally meet with all clients and appear themselves at all court hearings. Many large firms assign inexperienced attorneys to your case. And some of these firms are located thousands of miles away and only fly the attorney in the day of the court hearing. Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi have vast experience before local Michigan judges.

Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi can often make a winning difference at the application stage. And, if an appeal is necessary they have won several hundred cases before a court date is even set.

Those denied can appeal on their own but statistics for many years reveal that those represented by attorneys win a much higher percentage of appeals. And attorneys who specialize in Social Security Disability cases win a much higher percentage yet.

In addition to practicing only Social Security disability law attorney Bieske has written a book for attorneys about the subject and has been interviewed on various television programs. Both attorney Bieske and Alfonsi have also been interviewed on radio programs and have given speeches to many groups.

Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi offer free phone or office consultation. If they represent you, there will be no fee charged until after the case is won. The fee is a percentage of retroactive benefits.

Bieske and Alfonsi represent clients from all over the state of Michigan. They maintains offices in Sterling Heights, Livonia, Southgate and Novi. Call them at 1-800-331-3530 for a free consultation if you have been denied, or if you are thinking of possibly applying for Social Security benefits.

Work Outlook: Many members are working in neighboring locals, particularly Blue Oval Battery Plant in Marshall. Palisades Nuclear Facility is expected to work into spring of 2026, paying $57.78/hr. The work situation in and around Local 131 appears to be steady until spring and local contractors have reported a steady work outlook elsewhere in the jurisdiction. Palisades is expected to begin construction of its new SMRs sometime in 2026.
They are clearing ground, but we don’t expect manpower need on new construction until 2027. Palisades recommissioning work continues to require work with PCI Energy and Champion still placing manpower requests. The Solar Farm in Fabius Township is planned to begin in late ’27, according to the project manager. We do anticipate it to be an IBEW project, but details need to be hammered out. Liberty Solar Project is expected to need 70 wiremen at peak. It is scheduled to begin in April of this year and run until April of 2027.

- Studying the effects of chemical exposures, including wildfire smoke, black lung disease and emerging exposures.
- Performing annual black lung screenings for U.S. miners.
- Participating in the 9/11 World Trade Center Health Program that ensures survivors can qualify for care.

NIOSH carried out these and other critical functions with a budget of only $362 million – or about $2 per American worker.

Timeline of NIOSH Cuts and Reversals:

- April 2025: HHS eliminates roughly 850 of NIOSH's 1,000 employees in Washington, D.C. and field offices around the country.
- May 2025: HHS Secretary Robert Kennedy Jr. reinstates of the terminated employees after bipartisan pushback from federal and state officials, unions and industry. A federal judge ruled that cuts to NIOSH's Respiratory Health Division must be reversed.
- June 2025: Secretary Kennedy releases a proposed budget that would eliminate 80 percent of NIOSH's funding.
- July-December 2025: Laid off workers remain on administrative leave due to pending lawsuits about the legality of the reduction in force.

- January 2026: Some workers are brought out of administrative leave then notified days later their termination is permanent.
- January 12, 2026: HHS reverses course, revoking all previous layoff notices sent to NIOSH employees.

While it's unclear what led HHS to reverse course now, it's likely that continued union actions like demonstrations and rallies, powerful media stories about the importance of NIOSH's work and bipartisan pressure from members of Congress were factors. Another possibility is that these layoffs were likely to ultimately be found illegal in court, since NIOSH's work is mandated by federal law. Others note that passing the president's proposed budget will involve negotiation with lawmakers in the House and Senate, and that the deep cuts at HHS were very unpopular on both sides of the aisle.

What's Next for NIOSH & Worker Safety?

The April 2025 cuts threw national workplace safety research into disarray, and many experts warn that reinstating NIOSH's workforce won't immediately patch over the harm done to the agency. Some NIOSH staff are unlikely to return after spending nine months with their jobs in limbo. Many have moved on to other jobs, while others have relocated or retired. Major research projects have been interrupted and won't be easily resumed.

"We still have a long road ahead of us. We have a lot of rebuilding to do," said Micah Niemeier-Walsh, a NIOSH employee and vice president of AFGE Local 3840. "It's going to take some time to get projects moving again."

The bulk of NIOSH's workforce has been locked out for the last nine months, freezing progress on critical projects and long-term worker health studies. You cannot simply press pause on the safety of American workers for nine months and expect there not to be consequences. Yet, even if it takes some time, we are all better off with a fully functioning NIOSH than without it.

NIOSH's work strengthens worker safety and economic stability, reducing costly injuries and illnesses while providing industry with science-based guidance they can trust. By investing in prevention, we create a more resilient workforce, lower healthcare and workers' compensation costs and create a level playing field for responsible employers that prioritize safety.

Welcome back, NIOSH. America's workers deserve the programs, expertise and research that only you can provide.

portion of the project began in December, and it's expected to wrap up in July. They're working on Mausoleum 1 (of 3), and only a portion of the space is tarped and heated. The rest is open to the elements of a particularly cruel Michigan winter.

"We have a good crew and we're doing well," Reese said. "But it's cold. All the stone you touch is cold. It's not nice on the hands. Even the gravel is frozen at the foundations. But we don't let it stop us until it gets to about zero. There's a point where the silicone stops flowing."

The collection of three mausoleums and the chapel are part of the Our Lady of Hope section at the cemetery. The completed project will yield 4,500 new crypt spaces, with smaller spaces for urns and larger spots for caskets.

The four different types of granite come from a California quarry, and all the slabs are pre-cut before arriving on site. The panels are either .75 inches or 1.25 inches-wide, mounted on block walls.

"With the pre-cut panels, there's a long lead time before they get here, and the cuts are generally detailed and accurate,"

Reese said. He said with the weather, there is some shrinkage in materials, and the masons have to compensate slightly to make the panels fit properly.

The 300-acre Resurrection Cemetery is one of the state's largest, and several mausoleum are already on site.

Friends of Fishing appreciate union support

Cash contributions from Boilermakers Local 169, the Michigan Laborers and Operating Engineers Local 324 made them friends of “Friends of Fishing,” a volunteer 501c3 group that works with The Arc of St. Clair County.

At the request of retired boilermaker Robert MacLeod, the three unions made generous donations to The Friends, which in turn works with The Arc to sponsor the refurbishment of an adopted cabin at Camp Grace Bentley as well as supplies for their clients to enjoy fishing outings.

“I just wanted to get something in the paper that expresses our gratitude to those unions who contributed to the Friends of Fishing,” said MacLeod, a retiree from both the Boilermakers and the Laborers unions. “The money is 100 percent directed to helping people with disabilities. It has allowed us to sponsor a cabin, and to pay for fishing supplies.”

Friends of Fishing started as a local group of about 25 volunteers who took kids to learn the joys of fishing at a pond in Fort Gratiot, which MacLeod described as “a big body of water with plenty of bluegill.” After the pandemic, the group decided to join efforts with The Arc.

The Arc of St. Clair County says it is “committed to supporting and protecting the human rights of people with intellectual and developmental disabilities and advocating for their full inclusion and participation in the community,” and one of their missions is supporting Camp Grace Bentley north of Port Huron on the Lake Huron shore. As Michigan’s oldest special needs camp, Camp Grace Bentley, the group says, “has been a beacon of joy and acceptance for over 90 years. Here, we foster a nurturing environment where every individual can thrive, explore, and create unforgettable memories for children and adults.”

LAI-D-OFF GATEWAY Tunnel project tradesworkers rally on Feb. 10 to urge the Trump Administration to get their project restarted – and their jobs back.

Trump holds up $16B tunnel

Leader Chuck Shumer (D-N.Y.), who did indeed fight for federal funding the Gateway project, which will replace the deteriorating 116-year-old North River Tunnel – already a leading cause of delays that impact hundreds of thousands of train passengers.

A federal judge in New York on Friday, Feb. 6 quickly issued a temporary order barring the Trump administration from continuing to withhold money for the Gateway Project, but on Monday, Feb. 9, another federal judge allowed the project shutdown to continue through Feb. 12 to allow the Trump Administration to appeal the ruling. Some $200 million in federal funding was expected to flow to the project on Feb. 16 after a federal court order blocking funding for the project expired, allowing it to restart. But the Trump Administration said it would make further appeals to halt the project.

“Today’s shutdown of the Gateway Project is a reckless and profound failure of responsibility by the federal government,” said North America’s Building Trades Unions President Sean McGarvey. “Stopping work on this nationally critical $16 billion mega-project endangers the economic stability of the Northeast Corridor, the livelihoods of thousands of skilled building trades members and their families and directly undermines President Trump’s stated goal of modernizing the infrastructure that keeps America competitive, secure, and moving.”

Following Trump’s admission that the Gateway shutdown was part of a cut to “Democrat programs,” his administration issued other reasons for stopping the project, including the project’s potential for use of “unconstitutional DEI (Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion) principles.” Another reason given for the pause was to allow the U.S. Department of Transportation time “to review the project’s compliance with federal rules regarding disadvantaged business enterprise programs.”

The situation got more bizarre when a barrage of media reports said that in January Trump told Shumer that he was prepared to release the funding if Shumer agreed to a deal to rename New York’s Penn Station and Virginia’s Dulles International Airport after Trump. It fits the mold: Trump has already placed his name on the Kennedy Center, as well as the “Donald J. Trump Institute of Peace.” He has also announced a “Trump Class” of battleships and branded the federal government’s drug-related program “TrumpRX.”

On Feb. 6, Trump didn’t deny the conversation with Shumer, and told reporters aboard Air Force One that it was actually Schumer’s idea to rename Penn Station to “Trump Station.” Trump said Shumer “suggested that to me,” but Shumer immediately dismissed the president’s claim and accused him of lying about the details of their conversation. “Absolute lie. He knows it. Everyone knows it. Only one man can restart the project and he can restart it with the snap of his fingers,” Schumer wrote on X.

Laborers International Union General President Brent Booker said “by blocking funds that were allocated for the $16 billion project, the Administration’s chaotic and baffling actions have put the livelihoods of LIUNA members at risk. This recklessness threatens to cause significant economic harm to New York and New Jersey and corresponding ripple effects across the nation.

“It is reported that the Administration’s price to release funding to resume the project is to name New York’s Penn Station and Washington Dulles International Airport after the president. This is a vain demand being leveraged at the expense of our nation’s infrastructure and the hard-working building trades members now out of a job. This is not America First– it is Trump First and American workers last.”

Late last year, Trump’s Interior Department blocked construction of union-built wind projects being erected offshore on the Atlantic seaboard. The department paused the leases, and claimed that the construction of the wind turbines was shut down “due to national security risks identified by the Department of War,” said a statement by the Interior Department. The five projects would bring about 5.8 gigawatts of electrical production, and just two of the projects are estimated to cost about $16 billion. A federal court reinstated the leases last month so the projects could proceed.

Gateway Development Commission CEO Tom Prendergast said, “for more than two years the hard-working men and women building the Hudson Tunnel Project have not missed a day of work. That will change today, because the federal Administration continues to withhold funding for this vital investment in our nation’s rail infrastructure. After spending more than $1 billion, and countless hours of hard work, on this project, we will be left with empty construction sites in New York and New Jersey.”

“Once shovels are down, project sites simply can’t be abandoned. There is a massive hole in the ground in North Bergen and a 1,600-ton boring machine just sitting there,” said Shankar Duraiswamy, deputy solicitor general for the New Jersey Office of Attorney General.

Michigan’s moose not so loose

By Andy Henion
Michigan DNR

Michigan wildlife researchers are preparing to conduct the second phase of a collaborative study that aims to figure out why the Upper Peninsula moose population remains stubbornly stagnant.

This month, researchers from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Keweenaw Bay Indian Community and Northern Michigan University plan to capture up to 43 moose from the animals’ core range in the western U.P. and outfit them with GPS tracking collars. In the project’s first phase, in early 2025, 20 moose were captured and collared.

The first year of collar data and corresponding drone surveys are providing critical information. Researchers have learned, for example, that 17 of the 20 collared moose are still alive. That eight out of 10 collared females were pregnant and gave birth to 11 calves. And that one moose was killed by a vehicle, two by predators and one by unknown trauma.

Data from the upcoming capture will provide even more insights into why the moose population hasn’t reached the 1,000 mark as researchers had hoped when moose were reintroduced to Michigan in the mid-1980s.

The core moose population is estimated at about 300 animals, based on the DNR’s biennial aerial survey of the core moose range in Marquette, Baraga and Iron counties in 2025. That’s down from an estimated 426 moose in the 2023 survey. It’s not clear, however, whether the lower estimate reflects a population decline, a shift in moose distribution away from historically surveyed areas or a combination of both.

“We’re attempting to identify the potential factors that are most likely affecting Michigan’s moose herd, including disease, nutrition, reproduction, predation, vehicle collisions and habitat alteration,” said Tyler Petroelje, northern Michigan wildlife research specialist for the DNR.

“This collaborative research will help us understand the cumulative or compounding effects these factors are having on moose population growth.”

Moose predators in the U.P. include wolves and black bears, which primarily target vulnerable calves and weakened adults. Vehicles also pose a risk to the iconic animals; at least 60 moose have been killed in U.P. crashes in the past four years. And moose are susceptible to winter ticks – a single moose can carry up to 100,000 ticks in one season. And while winter ticks do not carry disease, the blood loss, skin irritation and hair loss can be fatal, especially during cold winters.

The research project is funded by the DNR and KBIC, with staff and support from NMU. Only about one percent of project funding comes from the Game and Fish Fund, which is supported by hunting and fishing license sales. The majority of funding comes from federal conservation grants, tribal partnerships and university resources.

KBIC has secured a $684,112 grant from the Bureau of Indian Affairs to support the moose capture and research project for two more years. The funding, which comes through the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative’s Distinct Tribal Program, will support field work in 2027 and 2028 and allow the project team to bring on an additional graduate student, expanding research capacity. Continued funding also enables longer-term monitoring of collared moose, which is critical for improving understanding of survival, reproduction and movement over time.

“We hope this effort will lead to a better understanding of what is or is not impacting the long-term sustainability of the Michigan moose population,” said Erin Johnston, wildlife and habitat manager for KBIC’s Natural Resources Department.

Johnston, who played a key role in securing the new grant, said the partnership between the tribal community, the state and academia bolsters the effort to study and manage moose in Michigan.

“We may not always approach the situation in the same way or from the same perspective, but that is what strengthens the collaboration – bringing different experiences, knowledge, perspectives and expertise to the table to explore the natural world,” she said.

During the capture operation, spotter planes will report moose locations to nearby helicopters and ground crews. Moose will be sedated, and crews will move in quickly to collect biological information and fit the moose with a tracking collar.

The captures will take place Feb. 13-21 in an approximately 500-square-mile block in the Michigamme Highlands.

Project researcher Diana Lafferty is an associate professor of biology and director of the Wildlife Ecology and Conservation Science Lab at NMU. She noted that the project not only provides useful information on the moose population but also benefits up-and-coming wildlife researchers.

“I’m grateful NMU provides graduate student support (i.e., tuition and fees) as well as faculty support for this exciting collaboration that brings together diverse people who have myriad perspectives and expertise in a shared effort to gain a holistic understanding of the factors limiting moose population growth in the U.P.,” Lafferty said.

“I’m really proud to be part of a team that values the coupling of research and education to strengthen our knowledge about the nature world while simultaneously helping to train the next generation of leaders in wildlife conservation and management.”

Hunters harvest 153 elk in Michigan in 2025

(From the Michigan DNR)

Michigan elk hunters faced challenging weather and storm-ravaged terrain to harvest 153 elk in 2025.

A record number of applicants – 47,493 – applied for one of just 260 elk licenses that were issued through the state’s annual drawing. The elk hunt took place in the northern Lower Peninsula over two periods – one that stretched across late August and September and one in December.

“With more than 47,000 applicants for the 260 elk hunting licenses made available, Michigan elk hunting is a highly prized opportunity,” said Brent Rudolph, the deer, elk and moose management specialist for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

“Despite their good fortune, the lucky hunters drawn for this year faced a variety of challenges to harvesting an elk,” Rudolph said. “Those challenges included high temperatures in the early hunt period, blustery cold and freezing rain in the late hunt period, and continued complications from the historic March 2025 ice storm that left significant areas of downed trees and debris in the woods of northern Michigan.”

Managing the herd. The DNR uses hunting as the primary method to sustainably manage Michigan’s elk population, which stands at an estimated 1,150 animals. The elk herd is centered in the Pigeon River Country State Forest, primarily in Cheboygan, Montmorency and Otsego counties.

The DNR Wildlife Division has proposed lengthening the elk hunting season for the 2026-2027 hunting cycle. Under the proposal, the two hunting periods would provide 45 total days of harvest time, more than double the current 21 days. The proposal will be presented for decision this spring by the Michigan Natural Resources Commission.

Perseverance, success. In 2025, the DNR issued 100 elk licenses for the first hunt period (30 licenses for any elk and 70 for antlerless only). The period was split into three sessions: Aug. 26-29, Sept. 12-15 and Sept. 26-29. During this hunt period, hunters harvested 50 elk (26 bulls and 24 antlerless elk) despite warm temperatures that reduced elk movement. Some hunters chose not to hunt when the temperatures reached the mid-70s due to the challenge of retrieving and processing the elk before the meat spoiled.

In addition, many trees and limbs were still down following the 2025 ice storm, making it difficult to traverse some areas in the woods. Elk were reported as not occupying some reliable past locations, another potential impact of the ice storm.

During the second hunt period, Dec. 13-21, the DNR issued 160 elk licenses (50 for any elk and 110 for antlerless only). Hunters harvested 103 elk (40 bulls and 63 antlerless elk). Opening weekend brought subzero wind chills, while warming temperatures and rain then removed the snow cover, making it difficult to track elk.

Bruce Nelson of Hastings said he had applied for an elk license every year that Michigan has held a drawing. “Have you ever known anyone who’s waited 61 years to get an elk?” Nelson said with a laugh. “It was an absolute privilege and a thrill to get my elk after all this time.”

As pioneers in asbestos litigation, GPW has filed asbestos lawsuits since 1984, defending the rights of hardworking men and women throughout Michigan, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and West Virginia.

Exposure to asbestos can cause deadly diseases such as MESOTHELIOMA, LUNG CANCER, ABESTOSIS, PULMONARY FIBROSIS, THROAT CANCER, and COLON CANCER.

Many building tradesmen worked with or near asbestos. Some are not aware they were even exposed. Family members may be at risk of bystander exposure.
